

Glossary of Weathering Articulations

by Andrea Collinari and Vera Bühlmann, May 2026

A Glossary of Weatherings is a Penelopean lexicon. Its words do not define; they undo inherited centres and weave them anew. Un-Definition: An Un-Definition does not determine what a word is; it reopens what a word may weather. An Un-Definition does not determine what a word means; it releases the weather a word may become capable of generating. Daidalic Propositions: Every Daidalic proposition follows a threefold movement: it withdraws an inherited centre, opens a threshold, and cultivates another articulation. Such propositions performs three operations: it removes an inherited centre, opens an estuary, and cultivates a new articulation.

Encyclopedia

Not a circle of knowledge, but a weather system of scales. An encyclopedia does not gather what belongs together; it cultivates conditions under which heterogeneous realities may become co-articulable.

Epos

Not the narration of a hero, but the maintenance of a plurality of scales around an event. Epic time protects worlds from being reduced to a single action.

Subject

Not the center of experience, but a temporary condensation within a common weather. A subject does not ground relations; it participates in their atmospheric modulation.

Custodian (Vormund)

Not a representative, owner, or sovereign, but the keeper of weathering conditions. The custodian maintains articulability where no common ground can be assumed.

Proposition

Not a statement about the world, but an invitation to weather together. A proposition asks whether realities may enter a common atmosphere without becoming identical.

Articulation

Not expression, but the cultivation of joints. Articulation creates passages between scales that would otherwise remain disconnected.

Sentence

Not the closure of meaning, but a meteorological event. A sentence allows heterogeneous orders to briefly share a rhythm.

Shield

Not an object of defense, but an armature of coexistence. The shield protects heterogeneity against reduction to a single operative scale.

Ekphrasis

Not description, but atmospheric expansion. Ekphrasis interrupts the narrowing of reality by allowing additional scales to enter the scene.

Representation

Not a mirror, but a weather front. Representation does not reproduce what exists; it modulates the conditions under which something may appear.

Daidalic Artefact

Not an object, but a fertility of articulation. A daidalic artefact is a portable proportionality.

Cultivation

Not production, but the patient adjustment of conditions. Cultivation asks what may grow together without requiring sameness.

Curation

Not selection, but atmospheric composition. Curation arranges the permeability between heterogeneous orders.

Exhibition

Not display, but exposure. An exhibition is an experiment in common weather.

Exposure

Not vulnerability alone, but reciprocal atmospheric participation. To be exposed is to become weatherable.

Collection

Not accumulation, but sustained adjacency. A collection maintains differences without collapsing them into a system.

Architecture

Not the construction of objects, but the weathering of abstractions. Architecture composes conditions under which scales may coexist.

Abstraction

Not a departure from reality, but the portability of proportion. Abstractions travel because they carry weathering capacities.

Mündigkeit

Not autonomy, but the capacity to participate in articulations without claiming sovereignty over them.

Mündung

Not an endpoint, but a threshold where scales become co-atmospheric.

Mund

Not the organ of voice, but a phonic weather apparatus. The mouth does not produce meaning; it proportions realities.

Dedali Opera

Not works, but weathering devices. Dedali opera are articulated arrangements that allow heterogeneous realities to remain equipollent.

Common Weather

Not a concept, an idea, or a ground, but a condition of co-appearance. A common weather is what allows realities to remain heterogeneous while becoming capable of coexistence.

Equipollence

Not equality, equivalence, or balance, but the capacity of heterogeneous realities to enter into proportion without becoming commensurable. Equipollence preserves asymmetry while allowing coexistence.

Contract

Not an agreement between sovereign entities, but an articulation of mutual weatherability. A contract does not establish ownership; it composes conditions of reciprocal exposure.

Daemon

Not a spirit or an identity, but an operator of passages. A daemon maintains circulation where no single scale can govern the others.

Threshold

Not a boundary, but a zone of atmospheric adjustment. A threshold does not separate; it proportions transitions.

Relation

Not a connection between pre-existing entities, but an event of co-articulation. Relations do not join things; they allow things to emerge together.

Topos

Not a place, but a pole position within a weathering field. A topos is where articulations gather without becoming fixed.

Topology

Not the geometry of forms, but the cultivation of continuities under transformation. Topology asks what may remain articulate while changing shape.

Organ

Not an instrument, but a weathering apparatus. An organ does not execute functions; it composes exchanges between heterogeneous scales.

Inversion

Not reversal, but re-articulation. Inversion displaces a center into a threshold.

Measure

Not a unit imposed from above, but a negotiable proportionality between scales.

Scale

Not a hierarchy of size, but a regime of participation.

Atmosphere

Not a surrounding milieu, but a condition of shared exposure.

Weathering

Not erosion, but the continuous adjustment through which realities remain co-atmospheric.

Intelligence

Not the possession of a subject, but the modulation of articulations.

Consciousness

Not the ground of continuity, but one historical technique among others for synchronizing scales.

Author

Not the originator of a work, but a temporary custodian of articulations.

Voice

Not expression, but a meteorological event.

Theatre

Not a stage of representation, but an atmospheric machine for co-presence.

Pole Position

Not a center, but a place of orientation from which heterogeneous scales may become mutually observable.

Clock

Not an instrument for measuring time, nor a device for synchronization, but an auxiliary organ that cultivates a common middle. A clock does not impose temporal order; it tempers heterogeneous rhythms into articulability. Its center does not belong to its scope. It remains ex-centric.

Middle

Not a center of governance, but a place of weathering. A middle is where heterogeneous scales become capable of entering into proportion without requiring a sovereign origin.

Gnomon

Not a measuring rod, but an instrument of cosmic modesty. The gnomon renders relations intelligible without claiming possession of them.

Machine (Vitruvian)

Not an automaton, but a cosmically tempered articulation. A machine is an auxiliary device through which heterogeneous scales may become equipollent.

Synchronizing Techniques

Epic

Synchronizes event and cosmos. The epic does not explain an event; it places it into a plurality of scales.

Ritual

Synchronizes body and seasonality.

It repeatedly aligns heterogeneous temporalities.

Law / Contract

Synchronizes heterogeneous agencies.

Law does not simply regulate behaviour; at its origin it negotiates proportions.

Architecture

Synchronizes bodies, climates, materials and durations.

It composes co-presence.

Consciousness

Synchronizes experience and historical continuity.

Its historical invention is to internalize synchronization.

Cartography

Synchronizes distance and orientation.

Maps do not represent territory; they synchronize positions.

Encyclopaedia

Synchronizes heterogeneous knowledges.

Its form changes historically.

Museum

Synchronizes temporalities.

It allows different epochs to share a common weather.

Exhibition

Synchronizes attention.

It produces temporary atmospheres of co-presence.

Collection

Synchronizes adjacencies. It produces resonance without hierarchy.

Mouth

Synchronizes breath, body, time and meaning.

AI

Synchronizes distributed intelligences.

Not by understanding them, but by modulating their traffic.

Custodia

Synchronizes conditions of continuity themselves.
